Local Sikhs celebrate growth

By Steve Marschke

It's impossible to miss the recently expanded Sikh Temple of Sacramento, located at 2301 Evergreen Ave. in West Sacramento.

Amid a residential neighborhood home to both law-abiding residents and occasional crime problems, the temple's new fountains, pools and dome-topped turrets stand out like a visitor from a foreign country -- which in many ways, it is.

The temple, which serves about 3,500 area families, honors a 500-year old religion rooted in India and practiced mostly by natives of that country and their families. But despite any cultural differences, temple members have made an effort to be "good neighbors" to Evergreen-area residents, even inviting them to last week's grand opening celebration of the new two-story, 20,000 square foot prayer room and adjoining facilities.

PRABHJOT SINGH SETHI in front of the new addition to the Sikh Temple on Evergreen Ave.

"The new building is almost four times the size of the old one," reports Prabhjot Sing Sethi of Orangevale, offering a reporter a guided tour Monday. "This started with meetings in people's homes, then we started meeting here (in the older building on the west side of the expansive new temple facilities)."

About 20 million people practice the Sikh religion, he explained. The word "Sikh" is pronounced somewhat like the English word "sick," but with a softened final "k" sound, although many Americans find it more convenient to pronounce the word as "seek."

"About two percent of the Indian population practices Sikhism," added Sethi ("Sethee"). "In almost any country, you'll see Sikhs."

About half of the population of Punjab in India are Sikhs, he added, and the 1,430-page holy book of Sikhism, the Sri Guru Granth Sahib, is written in poetry in Punjabi dialects as well as Sanskrit and Persian. It is the only major scripture compiled by founders of a faith during their lifetime, according to information from the temple.

The first Sikh guru, Guru Nanak, was born in 1469 and the religion was refined by nine succeeding gurus over the next 230 years, with their wisdom now carried on in the holy book.

"After the ten gurus, you now have to consider this book your guru," said Sethi. "Any advice you need is in there."

Sikhs believe in one supreme God, immortal, omniscient and beyond human comprehension. They also believe in Karma and in reincarnation of the human soul until ultimate union with God.

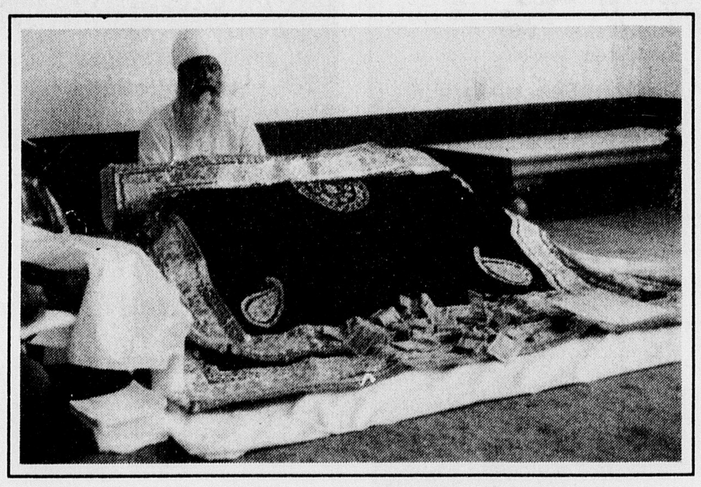

Sikhs believe in being useful and hard working as well, explains Sethi.

"You've got to earn your living," he said. "You will see hardly any Sikhs living on assistance. You also have to share with people who don't have enough and remember God all the time."

Sikhism bucks traditional Indian culture by not believing in the caste system, which categorizes and ranks each person from birth, from nobles to "untouchables."

"We don't believe in the caste system," Sethi stated. "Everybody is equal. Sikhism believes, too, that men and women have equal rights."

The West Sacramento temple holds its weekly services on Sunday, not because Sikhs believe in any one day as "holy," but because Sunday is convenient to meet. Worshipers arrive at the temple's expansive new prayer room, with high, sky-painted ceilings and virtually no furniture.

A MEMBER OF THE TEMPLE takes a turn reading from the Sikh holy book. As part of any major ceremony, readers take turns reading aloud; as part of the local temple's grand opening ceremony, the 1,430-page scripture will be read aloud in round-the-clock relays a total of 11 times -- a process expected to take about 22 days to complete.

"We always take off our shoes and cover our heads and we always sit on the floor," said Sethi, explaining the worship service. Before worshipers take their place for the service, they approach and bow to the holy book, placed on a dais in the front of the room. A priest presides over part of the Sikh worship service, explaining the wisdom of the scriptures. Music -- hymns read from the poetry of the holy book -- are a major part of the service.

An important part of the worship is a communal meal prepared in an adjoining room after the service, where congregants enjoy each other's fellowship.

Sethi said that Sikhs tend to be adventurous and outgoing people, which has led to their tendency to travel and migrate. The West Sacramento temple's members found their neighbors in the Evergreen area "very supportive" of the temple's expansion when it was applying for building permits, he added.

Good turnout for block parties in anti-crime effort

McGruff the Crime Dog was scheduled to join police staff members, city officials and others as West Sacramento neighborhoods participated in the 14th annual "National Night Out Against Crime" last evening.

Over 28 million people nationwide were expected to participate.

City Council Member Christopher Cabaldon reported late Tuesday night that he had visited 11 of the 14 organized neighborhood sites in the city Tuesday evening, and the function was well-celebrated.

"People were out everywhere in all corners of the city, and they were taking back the neighborhoods," he commented. "People were out talking and having a good time, but also planning how to fight crime."

Residents were encouraged to lock their doors, turn on their porch lights and head out to their street to meet their neighbors and organize community efforts in crime-watching. The event stressed the need for neighborhoods to come together and protect themselves against crime.

Several West Sacramento neighborhoods planned to repeat earlier years by closing streets and holding block parties.

Southport 'Cheaper' store slowed but alive

Although owners of a planned Cheaper store in West Sacramento's south area have long since won their right to build on the property in face of community opposition, construction has been delayed, reports company principal Ned Roscoe.

"I don't have a start date," he said last week, but affirmed that the company still plans to build at the Jefferson Blvd./Linden Road South location. "I've been kicking myself over fighting that battle before the bridge was built."

The Customer Company, which owns the Cheaper chain, had to spar with the city of West Sacramento to prove its new store wouldn't bring more traffic to the Jefferson Blvd. corridor. After a heated debate with the city, Cheaper won its permits, but then delayed construction.

Since then, the new Daniel C. Palamidessi Bridge has opened, relieving the city's building moratorium in Southport and rendering the battle over Cheaper's traffic impacts a moot point.

Meanwhile, the customer has divested itself of its other local location, a Cheaper store on West Capitol Ave.

"We sold the store we had on West Capitol," Roscoe reported. "We're moving more towards the 'Super Cheaper' stores."

The new "super" stores (like one on Woodland's East Street) have more square footage and strive to meet the company's description of "discount grocery store."

UPS strike continues at West Sacto site

Teamster's Union pickets continue to march in front of West Sacramento's United Parcel Service distribution point, near Harbor Blvd. and Shore Street, as the UPS labor strike continues.

The firm handles the bulk of the nation's package delivery duties.

One prime concern of the union is a desire to increase the number of full-time jobs at the business, which now employs mostly part-time workers. Full-time jobs pay better and have a higher level of benefits.

West Sacramento police have been at the UPS site as a matter of routine, as picket line members attempt to confront and block incoming and outgoing UPS trucks driven by relief drivers such as management personnel.

Annual chamber barbeque at ranch

From the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce

Honoring 50 years of community service and commemorating the city's 10th anniversary, the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce has set aside the evening of Thursday, August 7, to host their annual "Chamber Barbecue Bash." By popular demand, the event will be held once again at Fritz and Katherine Reamer's ranch on Jefferson Blvd., heading towards Clarksburg (approximately nine miles past Club Pheasant). There will be a no-host bar beginning at 5 p.m., with dinner following at 7. Throughout the evening, besides eating your fill on some of the best BBQ'd grub served this side of the Atlantic, attendees will be entertained by live music, in between "networking," forming new business acquaintances, winning valuable prizes and just plain old fashioned socializing as only West Sacramentans can!

Chamber president for 1997, Jim Repace of Cal Ram Construction, invites everyone to come rub shoulders with the area's "mover and shakers" as well as the "up and comers" in the regional business community. Repace was also quick to point out all of the excitement and momentum in our community based upon commercial growth projections with the potential for a real upswing in the local business economy. "West Sacramento has had quite a year, but this is only a beginning."

Chamber staff and board members will be on-hand to provide membership information packets to new (and returning) members and explain the many benefits of the Chamber. They will also be providing information on purchasing advertising on the next 14,000 copies of our updated city map. This will be distributed throughout the local area and to visitors at no charge. For current Chamber members there will be a drawing for $350 cash, since this event qualifies as a "Business After Hours" event. Bill Fairbairn of the Chamber staff said, "You must be a current member and present to win this special draw-

Roberts resigns

Longtime executive director Steve Roberts of the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce has reportedly announced his resignation, although he could not be reached Tuesday for comment or verification.

Roberts has been head staff member of the chamber since before the city's incorporation.

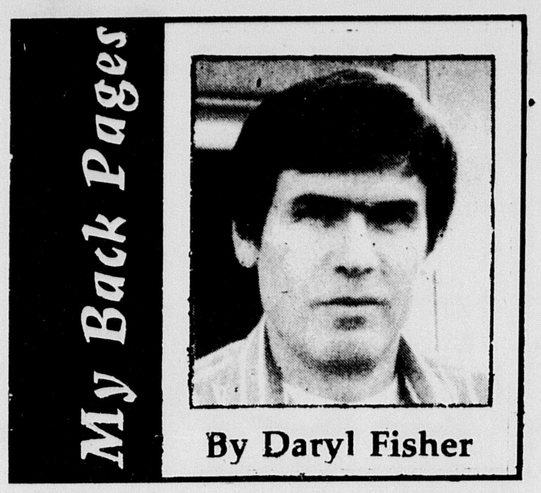

Further details on the resignation were unavailable at press time.

Men need to get in touch with their feminine side

Editor's note: Daryl is taking the month of August off from column writing. Here is one of his favorites from the past.

A friend was lecturing me the other day on the need in this country for more men to let their feminine side show. "How are we supposed to do that?" I asked her, not exactly sure what she meant. "Can you give me a few examples?"

"Oh, I'm not talking about you, silly," she said with a not so very reassuring pat on the shoulder. "You're plenty feminine!"

Later that evening, as I sat by myself in my backyard watching the sun go down, her somewhat alarming words kept banging around in my head. I even began to worry that maybe I'm not the truly authentic American male I've always imagined myself to be. And the more I thought about it, the more I had to admit to myself that I had never really been very good at 'guy stuff'.

For example, I have always hated, with a passion, working on cars. Over the years, I have reluctantly learned how to pump my own gas and where to pour the water and oil (the water goes in the bigger hole), but the thought of spending hour after hour up to my elbows in grease and auto parts has never really been very appealing to me.

I also dislike fishing (this probably goes back to a long ago Dillon Beach weekend I spent catching a couple of hundred perch only to learn they all had to be hauled up over the top of a high cliff and cleaned). I guess I just have never quite understood the attraction of sitting around quietly for hours in an uncomfortable boat or on a hot, dusty river bank pitting one's mentality against that of a fish.

Hunting is even worse than fishing. The one time I went was plenty for me. There were, and this is no exaggeration, crazed people in orange jackets everywhere with powerful rifles in their hands shooting at absolutely anything and everything that moved. Plus, after spending a year strolling around in the jungles of Vietnam trying to avoid ambushes, I have developed this deep empathy for the hunted.

I also don't like to go camping. The thrill of going without a shower for three or four days and sleeping on the hard ground basically lost all of its appeal to me while I was overseas. Plus my most vivid memory of going camping is not a very pleasant one. When I was about ten, my dad drove the whole family up to Sly Park for a wonderful weekend in the great outdoors, only to discover that he had forgot to bring the tent poles. I did manage to learn a whole lot of new cuss words that weekend, however.

I've never much liked drinking beer, either. Not only do I not particularly enjoy the taste of it, but every time I look at a can of the stuff, I end up thinking back to an all-night Colt 45 party I once attended at my college fraternity house where, during the course of the evening, I think I died and went to heaven approximately a half-dozen different times.

I'm also horrible at fixing things around the house. I can replace light bulbs and little things like that, but anything more complicated is completely out of the question. In fact, when my daughter recently broke up with her boyfriend, my first sympathetic words to her were, "Why in the world did you do that! Now who's going to fix things around here?"

"How come you look so depressed tonight?" asked my wife as she stepped out into the backyard and sat down in the chaise lounge next to me.

"Oh, I've just been thinking about something. By the way, I've got a question for you."

"What kind of question?"

"Well, would you say that I have an exaggerated feminine side? Be honest now."

"What?" she asked, smiling.

"I'm serious. I guess you probably don't think of me as a man's man, do you?"

"Oh, I'm afraid you're a man, alright," she said with an even bigger smile.

"Is that right?" I said, sitting up a little straighter in my chair and sticking my chest out.

"Yep," she said, "no doubt about it. You're 100 percent male."

"Could you be a little more specific?" I asked, hoping to hear her say that I was a great lover, or maybe that my walk reeks of masculinity.

"Well, for one thing," she explained, "you can't balance a check book. Why is it that men can't balance a simple checkbook? And like most men, you would quickly die of starvation if you didn't have some poor woman to cook for you. Plus you're incapable of buying, washing, or ironing your own clothes, you go ballistic if someone misplaces the TV clicker, all the kids have you wrapped around their little fingers, and you never want to get up out of your rocking chair and do anything fun. And while I'm on the subject, you also...."

"Thanks," I interrupted her, "I just needed to be reassured."

Fire stations to provide 'safe place' for youth in crisis

On Thursday, August 7 from 12 to 2 p.m. at Memorial Park in West Sacramento (Alabama Ave. and Regent St.), the City of West Sacramento Fire Department will hold a special event to introduce the program, "Project Safe Place," to West Sacramento. This program is a nationally-recognized network of "safe places" providing shelter for youths in crisis situations.

The four WSFD stations will display the official Safe Place logo, the sign that assistance is available to troubled young people. This is the only program of its kind in Yolo County. The event will also include a preview of the WSFD's "Back to School" fire prevention programs, featuring interactive demonstrations. Project Safe Place is coordinated locally by Diogenes Youth Services. Rep. Vic Fazio of West Sacramento will join officials from the West Sacramento Police Department, the Washington Unified School District, and Diogenes Youth Services to introduce the program to West Sacramento.

The success of Project Safe Place since its 1983 origin in Louisville, KY has led to implementation in over one hundred U.S. cities. The program received the Presidential Citation for Private Sector Initiatives in 1986 and the Most Innovative City Program from the National League of Cities in 1988.

Free assistance to businesses wanting info on recycling

From Kryss Rankin
Administrative Aide
City of West Sacramento

Quit throwing your money away! If you are still using landfill services to dispose of waste from your business, you may be doing nothing more than throwing your money away.

In the last few years, recycling technology has changed. Garbage, refuse and landfilling may not be the most efficient or even the cheapest way to manage a waste stream. Recycling could be the answer. In order to take the guess work out of garbage numbers, the City's Recycling Division offers free waste consultation services to all local businesses. The consultation includes a comprehensive waste audit to provide a custom waste and recycling program for your business. If your staff time is at a premium, city recycling staff can even provide a step-by-step assistance in planning and implementing your plan. Most businesses realize a cash savings when a plan is implemented and some have even found a market to sell what they thought was waste. A waste audit and custom program is only a phone call away. To take advantage of this free service, contact Denise Kotko or Kryss Rankin at the city's recycling division at 373-5893.

God's Special Angel

God needed a special angel
One loving, good, and kind.
And so he chose our Mother,
And left us all behind.

The tears we shed were many,
Our hearts were filled with pain.
But our loss upon this Earth,
Was surely Heaven's gain.

And though her heart no longer beats,
Her memory lives within.

Athlete, sportscaster coming

From Second Mile

Brent Jones is on his way, and he's drawing a crowd.

The San Francisco 49ers' star tight end will be in West Sacramento this Friday, August 8, to speak and sign autographs at the S'Mile Builder Luncheon, a benefit for the proposed Second Mile Teen Center. A limited number of tickets are still available for the luncheon, scheduled for 1 p.m. at the West Sacramento VFW Hall.

JOHN HENKE, KOVR-13

Jones will be joined at the luncheon by a number of local dignitaries and celebrities, including John Henke, sports director at KOVR Channel 13 in West Sacramento. Sacramento Bee sportswriter Don Bosley, an NFL columnist for ESPNet Sportszone and a West Sacramento native, will serve as the master of ceremonies.

Jones, entering his 12th NFL season, has won three Super Bowls with San Francisco and been named to four Pro Bowls. Among NFL tight ends, only Shannon Sharpe of the Denver Broncos and Jay Novacek of the Dallas Cowboys have caught more passes than Jones since 1990.

In addition to Jones' speaking engagement and autograph session, Friday's event will feature raffles and auctions for autographed 49ers souvenirs and a barbecue lunch catered by Outdoor BBQ.

Second Mile is a non-profit venture designed to provide a safe, alcohol- and drug-free environment for teenagers in West Sacramento and a sober alternative on Friday and Saturday nights. The effort is rooted locally and steered by Campus Life, a global youth organization that has run a successful teen center in Elk Grove and will open one in Carmichael this fall. The Second Mile executive committee is currently researching possible sites and launching a Founder's Club pledge drive.

Tickets to the S'Mile Builder Luncheon are $25 in advance and $30 at the door and -- for kids 10 and under, each accompanied by a ticketed adult -- $10 in advance and $15 at the door. Also, groups of eight adults may purchase a table for the reduced price of $20 a ticket in advance.

Tickets can be purchased at the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, 1414 Merkley; Baker's Square restaurant, 1235 Harbor Blvd.; or at La Bou restaurant, 849 Jefferson Blvd. Checks should be made payable to Campus Life.

The Giants sent the Dodgers a strong message last week after they pulled off a blockbuster trade with the Chicago White Sox. San Francisco stole three top pitchers from Chicago for six minor league players. The Giants acquired lefthanded Wilson Alvarez, relieve specialist Roberto Hernandez and veteran righthander Danny Darwin. All three pitchers will become free agents at the end of the season but the Giants are going for broke! Management has made a commitment to the players and fans to win this year!

Barry Bonds edged out Tony Gwynn for the National League Player of the Month for July. Bonds hit .362 with eight home runs, 25 RBI, a .483 on-base percentage and a .702 slugging percentage. The Giants (62-50) continue their east coast trip with three games in Chicago and Montreal. The Giants return home on August 11 to play the Reds.

Across the bay, the A's (43-70) unloaded Mark McGwire to the St. Louis Cardinals for Brian Stein, and a couple of minor league pitchers. Stein gave up six runs on eight hits and two walks in his debut for the A's farm team. The A's, who are 21 games out of first, knew McGwire would be a free agent next year because they cannot afford the $11 million he wants next season. The A's Friday night home game has been rescheduled because the Raiders need to use the field for their game against the Green Bay Packers at 7 p.m. The A's instead will play the Brewers in a Saturday night game at 6:05 p.m. and a Sunday afternoon doubleheader.

The 49ers look pretty confused last week in their 20-13 loss to the Chargers, while the Raiders out gunned the Cowboys in a 34-27 shootout. Speaking of guns, how about Cowboys coach Barry Switzer caring a loaded unlicensed gun into an airport. I've heard of coach's shooting from the hip but I think Switzer forgot to bring his holster.

The 49ers are at home this Saturday against the Seahawks. The game will be

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

'John-TV'

It's important not to get over eager in the fight against pesky crimes such as streetside prostitution, which continues to have a presence in West Sacramento.

Another valley town has begun a new anti-prostitution strategy called "John-TV," a tactic which targets the customers of prostitutes, often known as "johns." The idea is to televise the pictures and names of those arrested for soliciting prostitution, and therefore scare off other would-be customers and dry up the local prostitution trade.

The same idea has also been tried in many newspapers nationwide, where space is set aside to publicize the identity of those arrested for solicitation.

What's wrong with this?

A lot.

Opponents claim that these programs, when sponsored by police, are unconstitutional. These critics are right.

"John-TV," like publishing the names of arrested "johns" in a newspaper, amounts to an attempt to scare off potential customers of prostitutes with the threat of having their name and face publicized in their community. To make this threat real, the police and local media have to make public the names of those who are actually caught, deliberately causing them shame and humiliation in order to cause the desired "deterrent" effect.

In other words, they have to punish some people in the community who have not yet been convicted of a crime in order to discourage other people from committing the same crime.

The problem is that this is a form of punishment, meted out without trial or sentence. Those whose names are published or televised have been arrested, but not (at least yet) found guilty of the allegation of soliciting a prostitute. Our constitution is supposed to protect us from punishment without due process.

Yes, the names of those arrested are public record, and newspapers and television stations have the right to report them if they feel there is news value to the story. But government on any level should have no part in using this information to punish people without a trial.

West Sacramento has considered a similar program of publishing the names and pictures of "johns" arrested in town. Rightly, the idea has been dropped.

But the city has done other things in its war against prostitution that are worth a close look. For example, the local police department once instituted a policy of sending a letter to the accused "john's" home advising him of the threat of picking up AIDS or other sexually related diseases while looking for sex on the street in West Sacramento. The letter, ostensibly to advise him of health issues, was actually designed to cause an uproar in the accused customer's household (perhaps with his wife), when it arrived in the regular mail on West Sacramento police letterhead.

To the extent that any of West Sacramento's practices are intended to punish people who are arrested for suspicion of patronizing prostitutes, these tactics are wrong and should be renounced.

Protection of our personal rights and liberties are among the most wonderful parts of the U.S. Constitution and they are not to be trifled with.

Letters to the Editor

Compassion?

I double dare anyone who voted for Prop. 187 to watch "Fear and Learning at Hoover Elementary School" (Point of View, Channel 6). It is an amateur documentary taped by a 4th grade teacher in L.A. I hope they rerun it a thousand times.

It forces the self-righteous to witness the cruel consequences of their vote. These innocent children already suffer from poverty and discrimination. To see them used as scapegoats and such needless humiliation heaped on their heads is truly obscene. All this manufactured misery just to feed the sick ambitions of a few twisted politicians. This is California's dark night of the soul and we are all caught up in the shame.

If you can watch this hour from beginning to end, and still support 187 -- better check your pulse -- for you, fellow citizen, have no heart.

Open primaries

It is interesting that both major political parties are challenging the open (or "blanket") primary law approved by voters via Prop. 198 last November. This law, unless overturned by the courts, will no longer restrict voters in primaries to candidates of their registered parties.

It should be especially interesting in those races where no opposition is offered to the one and only (& leading) candidate by that major party. Since the unopposed is a shoe-in, that party's voters could vote overwhelmingly for whomever in the other major party they deem least likely to win in November. But with so few votes potentially going to the shoe-in, could such massive cross-over voting result in the target candidate getting more than 50 percent of all votes cast? And could enough of the shoe-in's voters write in the name of the other party's "least likely to succeed candidate," giving that person not only an overall majority of all votes cast, but a majority from both major parties? If so, would not this winner of votes from both major parties be declared winner of general election; hence no need to vote for that office in November, right?

If Prop. 198 remains law, it should make future elections much more interesting and cause higher voter turnout as voters would seem to have a stronger voice in the outcome.

From Pastor

After 37+ years, I am leaving photo retailing. My last day at Kits Cameras will be August 1, 1997. I will miss all of the wonderful people that have been a part of my life for so many years. However, it is time for a change. I feel the need to be in control of my life. I want to spend more time with family and to better administer my duties as pastor of the Anna Street Baptist Church.

After a period of rest, relaxation and travel, there is the possibility of a new adventure into the area of automobile windshield repair or some other endeavor. Just remember. I am as close as the telephone or fax machine or the computer.

From Marna

To counter the statement last week about my approach to the Brown Act, all I ask, is that the city post the agendas on the glass walls in the city hall so that it is visible to the public for 72 hours before meetings, not locked up in a building for half of that time. And three agenda Packets to the library would be reasonable, rather than one copy for checkout. Of course, you must believe that the public is entitled to information, for the good of their city or you relegate the public to the "nuisance" category, because they might interfere with preconceived judgements.

County Clerk's competence is again the source of question, but from Davis' point for a change. City Clerk sent bond issue information to Toni Bernhard to issue, and talking to other clerks, it seems that getting a "proof" copy from him would take an act of God (something regular businesses must do for liability purposes). Therefore, the clerk has been getting calls about the fact that the literature says that a majority vote is needed when law says that two-thirds majority vote is needed to pass the bonds. So, it will be interesting how Davis will pay for this mistake, as Toni seems to be able to do anything and all goes well for him. Now, from my perspective, Helen Kanowsky of W.S. or Mrs. Pfanner of Davis would be a good replacement for Toni Bernhard. Both have more competence on a daily basis than the existing clerk has in his history of, "I'm sorry's," "there must be a misunderstanding," "policy is unclear," "it seems to be unclear why (how) (what)...," etc. I'm basing this harsh statement on three voting "mishaps" in the county, Grand Jury Reports, information from several county and city employees (most not having an ax to grind and not knowing who is listening while they are talking), as well as residents who have been here much longer than myself.

October 11, 1997, there is a conference about the "horrors" of Redevelopment Agency stories in many cities. From Fresno "sent-to-prison" for illegal activities people, Brea's $662 billion Big Box Shopping Complex, Chino's corporate welfare costing $13.5 million, Socialized Sports Stadiums built with our tax dollars and helping the politicians (you could include Sacramento's and S.F.'s in this rip-off). The Long Beach -- Cosco ordeal will probably be discussed, as Sarah Foster will no doubtedly be there.

This conference is made up of over seven local and regional groups which have started networking. We all have the goal of making Redevelopment Agencies and government accountable for the stunts they pull of the public and taxpayers. C.A.R.T.A., C.U.R.E., R.R.A., M.O.R.E., Spirit of 13 Committee, acronyms for groups that are fighting for public disclosure and accountability to the tax payers, and align themselves with principles that Gann and Jarvis have been working on, but with local applications and problems to solve. Over a hundred people participated with presentations from Senators, Assemblyman, Councilmembers, Richard

Since I had to file the semi-annual report for compliance with FPPC's law, let me tell you that understanding what they want is hardly an elementary task. They say they are interested in making politics more "fair," but they just tend to make it more difficult to interpret and decipher.

ing. If not already a member, I suggest signing up before the event to have a chance at the cash since it will more than pay for annual membership dues." Fairbairn noted that the Chamber staff had sent out over 1,000 invitations to local establishments late last week and earlier this week. "We look forward to this event, and beginning a redirection of the Chamber to becoming more in touch with the established businesses. We need your input...here's your chance!"

There will also be raffles and a silent auction to help defray the costs of this community-wide event. Many local businesses have already contributed some fantastic prizes for the evening. Once again, you must be present to win. With so much to do and so many prizes, everyone's going to be a winner!

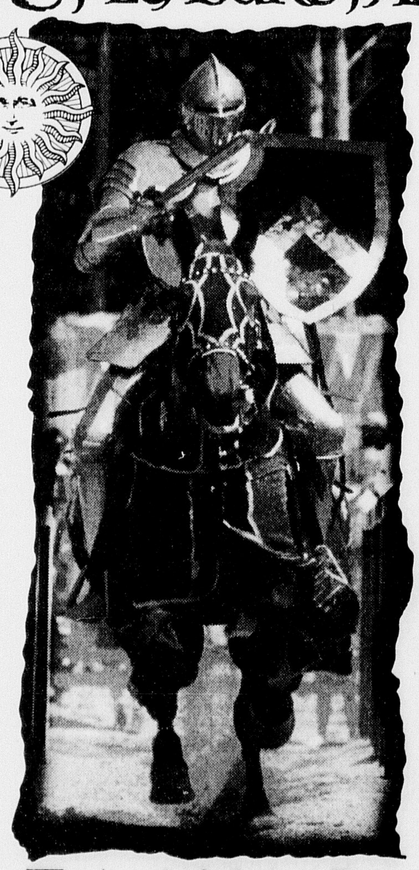

Tickets cost $25 each and may be purchased either through the Chamber of Commerce or Chamber board members. For the over 1,000 local businesses who received the event mailing, fill out the ticket stub with your name, business name and address, and mail it back to the Chamber at P.O. Box 404, West Sacramento, 95691. There will only be a limited number of tickets available at the event so buy yours soon. For further information on the one annual event that promises you more fun than you've had this year (not to mention tremendous food, beverages and great company), please call the Chamber staff at 371-7042.
